Writing

In the era of globalization and technology, using social media has become a daily routine of plenty of people. It has a great impact, especially among teenagers, who are mostly addicted to social life. However, only a little amount of individuals know the merits and demerits of it.

On the one hand, social activism gives the positive aspects, such as leaving new skills, getting an extra knowledge because internet can also be a tutor. Moreover, getting the latest news as soon as possible, as well as making new friends from whole the world are happen thanks to social media.

On the other hand, teenagers can get negative aspects of it. In other quarters, there are a huge amount of information, which may consist a bad influence for teenagers. As an example of it, media such as videos or photos of bad manner. Put differently, it can be video about a crime or even about a murder.

To sum up all aforementioned points illustrate that participating in social activism has own benefits and risks on personal development.

However it seems to me, that if social medias hadn't been existed, people would have had totally different lives.
